ABSTRACT

The five month course of study for grades 9 through 12 offers activity guidelines and a variety of resource materials on American ethnic groups of Chinese, Irish, Italian, and Jewish persons. Focus is upon the cultural diversity of the American people, and the adjustments and contributions of the ethnic groups. The aim of the course is for students to not only gain insight into historical and sociological background but also to understand the minority groups' problems and frustration. The need is for students to develop open-mindedness and cultural awareness. Content is presented using a thematic approach by which themes can be used in any order or at any grade level. Five proposed units are outlined according to ethnic group themes. The first provides a conceptual framework for ethnic groups in general. Other units are: Chinese-Americans, Irish-Americans, Italian-Americans, and Jews in America. Each unit is arranged in four sections that include: 1) course content, dealing with the nature of fundamental concepts: ethnic, race, stereotypes, prejudice, discrimination, inferiority, ethno-centrism, and others: 2) varied sample learning activities; 3) a bibliography; and, 4) a list of audio-visual materials. An appendix contains listings of organizations available for resources in ethnic studies. (SJM)

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This experimental curriculum bulletin, Ethnic Studies, Elective Resource Bulletin, was prepared as a project of the Bureau of Curriculum Development, Dr. David A. Abramson, Director, in cooperation with the Bureau of Social Studies, Dr. Leonard Ingraham, Director. Dr. Seelig Lester, Deputy Superintendent for Instructional Services, provided overall superivision of the curriculum development program.

Dr. Daniel A. Salmon, Assistant Director, Bureau of Curriculum Development, served as coordinator of the Curriculum Development Workshop Programs.

The original manuscript was prepared by:

Norman Fisher, Bushwick High School Richard Kobliner, DeWitt Clinton High School

These materials are being distributed to selected junior high schools, intermediate schools, and high schools for tryout and evaluation. Suggestions for modification of the final publication are solicited and should be returned by June 1, 1972 to:

Title: ETHNIC STUDIES

Summary of Course:

elective course in Ethnic Studies. The term elective is not to be construed as elected at the will of the intellectually gifted. The concepts of this course are relevant to all students on all intellectual levels. The teacher must there- of the choose the content and learning activities which are best suited for the level of his classes. The themes and case studies in this course of study can be used in any order on any grade level the teacher desires and may become a mini-course in itself. The course of study also provides the opportunities for individual research and the evaluation of pertinent issues for students in an urban environment.

It is essential today for young people to have the ability to critically evaluate and analyze the complex situations confronting the interaction of groups. The ability to think critically requires a knowledge of the facts and an awareness of the influence of emotion on the ability to reason. Not only will the student be called upon to act as a social scientist interpreting the relevancy of sociological information, but he will be asked to be aware of the implications of his individual responses and assumptions. Knowledge and reason will be our vital tool for the student to achieve an understanding of the interaction of groups.

The assumption of the course is that it is not easy for young people to think about ideas, events, peoples, and cultures which they do not understand and therefore will develop stereotypes of groups. The student must draw on his understanding of a culture, a history, a philosophy, and a religion vastly different from his own. The extent of his understanding will be related to the depth, breadth and variety of his store of concepts.

This course of study has as its central theme the cultural diversity of the American people. The material presented in the course attempts to teach the fundamental concepts: ethnic, race, stereotypes, prejudice, discrimination, inferior, ethnocentrism, group conflict, conditioned behavior, cultural transmission of values and assimilation. It examines these concepts through a variety of sources: literature, graphs, political cartoons, music, historical documents, historical essays, films and records.

The content selected is geared to the Jewish, Italian, Puerto-Rican, ish and Chinese ethnic groups. This doesn't mean to imply that other ethnic coups offered little to the development of the United States. However, any attempt include these other groups within the limitations of a five-month course of tudy would defeat the significance of the course. Teachers should feel free to aclude similar studies of other groups when there is a relevancy to the needs of the school and the community.

pjectives - Ethnic Studies

- . To understand that in the process of becoming Americanized almost every group faced unique problems.
- . To understand the significance of the environment in which a person lives greatly affects his opportunity for personal growth.
- . To realize that almost every immigrant group faced hostility from other groups.
- . To comprehend that every society develops its own system of values.
- . To understand that prejudice and stereotypes are based on emotions and not on reason.
- .. To appreciate the values and traditions of various immigrant groups that have settled in the United States.
- . To comprehend that ethnocentrosisms leads a people to exaggerate and intensify everything in their outline which serves to increase prejudice toward other groups.
- . To realize that conflicts result when different outlines are incompletely assimilated.
- . To identify that immigrant groups tend to form a group cohesiveness until assimilation occurs.
- . To signify that members of all societies view their own cultures as superior to other cultures.
- . To understand the difficulties and frustrations faced by immigrant groups that settled in the United States.
- 1. To appreciate the contributions that immigrant groups have given the United States.
- 1. To develop an open-mindedness, and respect for the opinions and ideas of others.
- . To understand the role of minority groups within the urban environment.
  - To develop insight into historical and sociological origins of ethnic groups

- 16. To increase the awareness of the similarities among the ethnic groups of the United States.
- 17. To provide opportunities for individual research and identification in exploring possible solutions to some of the problems faced by ethnic groups in the United State
- 18. To appreciate the traditions and customs that have been fostered from each generation
- 19. To understand the significance of the pluralistic society in American life.
- 20. To perpetuate an awareness of the ethnic heritage.

Overview

The case studies of the Italians, Irish, Jews, Chinese and Puerto Ricans, are illustrative of the themes and content from which the teacher might select in implementing a course in ethnic studies. The understandings described below are relevant for a study of the ethnic groups chosen. Teachers should be cognizant of the significance of these understandings when selecting the materials for the study of an ethnic group.

- 1. Immigration from areas other than Western Europe played as a significant role in the development of the United States.
- 2. All thnic groups have contributed to the development of the United States.
- 3. The "new" immigrants entered the United States at a time when rapid individualization had already created a stratified society which was less receptive economically to the "new" immigrants than for earlier immigrants.
- 4. All ethnic groups have attempted to reconstruct old world societies in America which would provide ethnic identification.
- 5. Ethnic ghettos played an important role in acculturating the newcomer politically, culturally, and socially.
- 6. Discrimination and prejudice has forced minority groups to live in slums and has forced upon minority members certain occupational patterns.
- 7. All ethnic groups have had to deal with stereotypes of their ethnic group.
- 8. Ethnic groups struggle against prejudice and discrimination has made America more democratic for all.
- 9. Ethnic groups entered the American stream of life through political and economic advancement within the American society.

Overview

11

This theme provides the student with the conceptual framework necessary for the study of ethnic groups. America's ethnic groups have had similar problems and similar solutions to the problems. We begin by considering the nature of the racial and thenic identity and then proceed to the patterns of prejudice and discrimination, the effects of prejudice and discrimination. The emphasia throughout is upon the group awareness of the ethnic groups, the adjustment and contributions of the ethnic groups.

THEME I - The Nature of Racial and Ethnic Identity

What is the nature of the racial identity?

- 1. Man is divided into 3 broad classification of races
  - a. they differ in the frequency of one or more genes which determine the heridatary concentration of physical traits.
  - b. racial traits are not fixed, they may fluctuate and disappear in the course of time.
- 2. There is no evidence of any inborn differences of temperament, personality, character or intelligence among races
  - a. differences among races in matters of school performance test are due to environmental and motivational factors
  - b. differences are also due to "social class position" in terms of income, education, and occupation.

What is the nature of the ethnic identity?

- 1. An ethnic group consists of cultural factors not biological factors
- 2. Social and cultural traits can be compared in an ethnic group to the extent that its culture passes from generation to generation.
- 3. Ethnic characteristics are the product of learning not inherance.
- 4. A group with a shared feeling of cultural characteristics is an ethnic group.
- 5. Some sociologists establish ethnic group to mean any group set off by race, religion, or national origin or some combination of these categories. These categories have a common social-psychological referent, in that all of them.

These categories have a common social-psychological referent, in that all of them serve to create, through historical circumstances, a sense of peoplehood for the group.
- 6. America's ethnic group were at one time concentrated in particular areas of the country, the areas of concentration have diminished with growing industrialization, internal migration and the appearance of successive generations.
- 7. In America, most ethnic groups began its life at the lowest economic and social scale.

Concepts:

No scientific basis has been uncovered for determining the superiority of one culture over another (A-S)

Cultural differences of ethnic groups are the products of habits, attitudes, beliefs and institutions developed in the course of adjustment to their environment (

The Patterns of Prejudice and Discrimination

What are the patterns of prejudice?

- 1. Prejudice can be based on the over-categorization of unclear impressions.
- 2. Ethnic prejudice is based upon faulty and inflexible generalizations.
- 3. Prejudice is characterized by fear and anxiety in relation to the group against which it is directed.
- 4. Prejudice can be directed at a whole group, as well as, to an individual member.
- 5. When prejudice is part of the individual culture, it can move its direction from one group to another.
- 6. No two cases of prejudice are precisely the same.
- 7. Prejudice is based upon economic competition.

What are the patterns of discrimination?

- 1. Discrimination is categorical when it is applied to all members of the minority.
- 2. Discrimination occurs only when denying to individuals or groups, equality of treatment which they seek.
- 3. Discrimination may operate to create unequal rewards for work that is done in wage differentials or access to promotion.
- 4. Discrimination may operate in the sphere of political rights, thus limiting access to the ultimate channel of power.
- 5. Discrimination is practiced chiefly in covert and indirect ways, and not primarily in face-to-face situations.
- 6. Sterotype is an oversimplified generalization that emphasizes only selected traits of another group.
- 7. A sterotype is an exaggerated belief associated with a category.
- 8. A sterotype applied to one group of people at one time may be applied to another group at a later time.
- 9. Sterotypes may include physical characteristics, cultural practices or beliefs and myths.

- 11. Scapegoating can be based on the frustrations of an individual who blocks out from realizing his needs or desires.
- 12. An enraged person needs to vent his emotions and makes no difference against whom he directs his aggressive feelings.
- 13. Some sources for the displacement of hostile aggression are preferrable to others.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Theme I

The teacher can begin the conceptual framework by dividing the chalk board into as many columns as there are students in the class. Ask the students when you hear the name (name of Ethnic group) what comes to your mind? If the class presents you with the classical sterotypes like:

Italians-Mafia

Jew-Miser

Irish-drunk

How did people gain impressions like these?

Do you have any (Italian, Jewish, etc) friends? Do they fit the characteristics that we placed on the board?

What effects would these stereotypes have if people believed they were true?

How is prejudice taught and learned?

The Roots of Prejudice

Scholastic Magazines

The teacher can select some of the quotations that follow to motivate classroom discussions:

- 1. What is prejudice? How is prejudice taught and learned.
- 2. What's the difference between a race and ethnic group?

"A prejudice is a vagrant opinion without visible means of support."

Ambrose Bierce in The Devil's Dictionary, 1906.

"The chief cause of human errors is to be found in the prejudices picked up in childhood."

Rene Descartes, 17th century French philosopher

"All those who believe in the visibility of ghosts can easily see them, so it is always easy to see repulsive qualities in those we despise and hate."

Frederick Douglass (1817-95), American abolitionist

"Prejudice is never easy unless it can pass itself off as reason." Wm. Haglitt, English Essayist (1778-1830)

"It is never too late to give up our prejudices."

Henry David Thoreau, American author and philosopher (1817-1862) in Walden

"He finds his fellow guilty of a skin not colored like his own."
William Cowper, 18th century
English poet

"Prejudice is the bandage that protects a sore segment of the brain."

Ben Hecht, American novelist and playwright (1894-1964)

"Man's relations with his fellow man cannot today be considered a national one. It involves mankind all over the world, and in our time looms as the great frontier in the forward advance of the human race."

The teacher might select some graphs which illustrate discrepancies between blacks and whites in economic advancement, education, etc.

Questions for skill development:

- 1. What information can we obtain from these graphs?
- 2. What differences exist between blacks and whites?
- 3. What sterotypes might these graphs create?
- 4. What information would we need to disprove the sterotypes?
- 5. What factors might help us explain the differences between blacks and whites?

Follow-up Activity

Ask students to read Carl C. Brigham's article.

Ask students to rewrite the article as a bar graph.

What sterotypes might the graph support?

Why might statistics and graphs be dangerous to use without additional information?

What factors might disprove Brigham's argument?

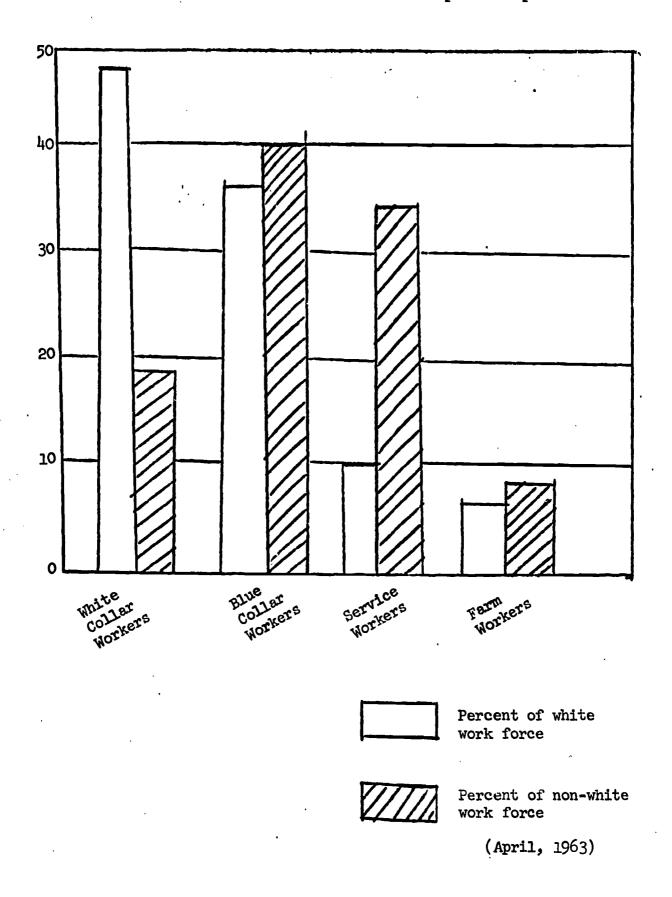

What is Berkson's major theme? Do you agree? Why?

What conclusions might Berkson make if he were shown your graph?

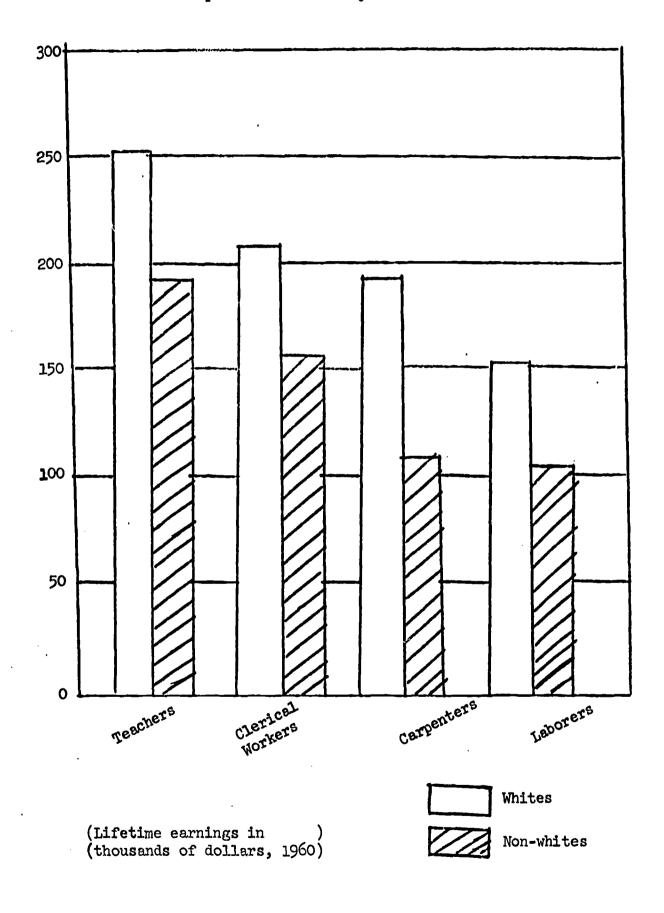

Ashbey Montagu wrote a book entitled Race: Man's Most Dangerous Myth. Can race be a dangerous myth? Explain.

Non-whites are concentrated in the low-paid occupations.

Non-whites are paid less when they do same work as whites.

Mr. N. Fisher

Our study of the army tests of foreign born individuals has pointed at every step to the conclusion that the average intelligence of our immigrants is declining .... the migration of the Alpine and Mediterranean races (from southern and eastern Europe) has increased .... (and) ....

The representatives of the Alpine and Mediterranean races in our immigration are intellectually inferior to the representatives of the Nordic race (from nothern and western Europe) which formerly made up about 50% of our immigration .... We may consider that the population of the United States is made up of four racial elements, the Nordic, Alpine, and Mediterranean races of Europe, and the negre. If these four types blend in the future into one general American type, then it is a foregone conclusion that this future blended American will be less intelligent than the present native born American, for the general results of the admixture of higher and lower orders of intelligence intelligence intelligence in the intervitably be a mean between the two.

Carl C. Brigham

A Study of American Intelligence

Apart from the dubious assumption of the superiority of one race over another, whatever evidence we have should utterly refute the idea that knowing a man's race you could know very much about his mental and moral characteristics. The variability amongst individuals of the same race with another are so great in the measurement of any trait in original nature, that "race" becomes a useless criterion for determining an individual's place on any scale .... It is erroneous to fly to the conclusion that the inferiorities and evils when they do exist are caused by the race of the immigrant. What is more probable is that social and governmental conditions in other lands are to be blamed ....

America, it should be remembered, does not exist for the benefit of any one class of persons, whether we consider the grouping economic, political, or racial. The idea that the predominating stock of the inhabitants of the United States is Anglo-Saxon is a myth. The composite American is a multi-form hyphenate: Scotch-Irish-English-German-Polish-Jewish-Italian-Russian, etc., etc.... To conceive of America as belonging exclusively to one race, because priority of habitation has given it a divine right to possession of the land, is a notion contrary to democracy. Indeed, this minority, due to its priority and to the undoubted excellence of native gifts, has stamped its culture ineffaceably upon American life, its language, its political organization and spiritual aspirations. The influence of this group outweight, justly, that to which its numerical strength would entitle it. To say, however, that American institutions and forms of life have once and for all been fixed by the fathers of our country and that the newcomers, the majority, must mould themselves into these forms, is itself contradictory to the principle of freedom upon which these forms are built. Even under the conditions of Russian persecution the Jew was permitted to speak his own language and to live in many senses an independent cultural life. But if a conception of Americanism as here outlined is to be followed, such rights would be taken from him, in this country whose distinct and peculiar excellence lies in its gift of freedom. The result of such a program of Americanization is a tyranny over the beliefs and minds of men worse than the economic

It is possible to speak of justice, duty, service and loyalty, of law, order and government in other languages than English. Yet too often does the "Americanization" theory imply that righteousness is Anglo-Saxon exclusively and that foreign languages ought therefore not to be tolerated.

RECOMMENDED FOR USE WITH SLOW LEARNERS

It is rainy afternoon and you are home perhaps with your younger brother or sister, niece or nephew or cousins. The children are between the ages of 7-9. You find this poem by Robert Louis Stevenson entitled, Foreign Children, and you read it to them.

After you read the poem you ask the children the following questions:

- 1. What different types of children are mentioned?
- 2. What are some of the differences between you and the children mentioned?
- 3. Would you like to eat some of the foods and do some of the things the foreign children do?
- 4. How do you think you're better off than the foreign children?

What answers do you expect the children to give you for each questions asked?

Do you think it was a good poem to read to children?

Read Kipling's short poem "They and We."

If Kipling met Stevenson - What would they say to each other?

How do the children's answer illustrate Kipling's theme?

If you were living in the Orient how would the conception of Americans differ?

If you were walking through the halls of your school and you overhead your friends make the following statement:

"It makes me sick just thinking about my kids going to school with those Puerto Ricans."

"Every time I see a Negro on the street at night I get scared stiff."

"Don't you hate the way Jews exploit everybody? I simply can't stand them."

"I know it's wrong but I shiver at the thought of rooming with an African student next year."

What reasons prompted these statements?

What statements would you make to your friends in answer to their statement?

FOREIGN CHILDREN

Robert Louis Stevenson

Little children, Sioux or Crow, Little Frosty Eskimo, Little Turk or Japanese, Oh! don't you wish that you were me?

You have seen the scarlet trees And the lions overseas; You have eaten ostrich eggs, And turned the turtles off their legs.

Such a life is very fine, But its not so nice as mine: You must often, as you trod, Have wearied not to be abroad.

You have curious things to eat, I am fed on proper meat;
You must dwell beyond the foam, But I am safe and live at home.

Little children, Sioux or Crow, Little Frosty Eskimo, Little Turk or Japanese, Oh! don't you wish that you were me?

* * *

All good people agree, And all good people say, All nice people like Us and We And everyone else is They:

But if you cross over the Sea, Instead of over the way, You may end by (think of it!) looking on We As only a sort of they!

Rudyard Kipling, "We and They," in Debits & Credits, London: Macmillan, 1926, pp. 327-28.

Learning Activities

- 1. The teacher might select national anthems from several national groups.

  The teacher can then ask the class the following questions:
  - a. What are the ideals of the group according to the anthem?
  - b. How would the ideals compare with American ideals?
  - c. Would there be conflict between these ideals?
  - d. How would an ethnic group with these ideals react when they come to America, a strange environment.
- 2. Songs from musicals can offer a springboard for inquiry. The theme in South Pacific has as its central theme the meeting of different cultures. A song which is useful is "carefully taught." The problems of people from different cultures coming together is also apparent in The King and I.

The Interview with an Informant

Assume you are a cultural anthropologist and you are studying a portion of American culture. You want to find out how people define race and some of the beliefs they have about race. One method you might use is the interview method.

Use the following interview questionnaire as a guide and obtain between 7 to 10 interviews. Record each person's response during or after the interview.

Interview Questionnaire

- 1. What does the word race mean?
- 2. How many races are there?
- 3. What are they?
- 4. Why are there different races?
- 5. How would you describe these different races?
- 6. Are there some races you don't care for?

After each interview you might ask yourself these questions:

- Did the person seem hesitant or nervous about the questions? (Did he become emotional?)
- 2. Did his enswers reflect a knowledge of reso as a social consept

Learning Activities

Mending Wall by Robert Frost

- 1. Why does the neighbor in the poem say "Good fences make good neighbors?" From whom did he learn this?
- 2. Frost obviously feels walls are not necessary but he does not mention this to his neighbor. Why?
- 3. What does the poem suggest in terms of in-group and outgroup?
- 4. How might the poem be an analogy for a society divided by segregation?

The Drive for Ethnic Power: Making a Myth Of the 'Melting Pot'?

HEARD any good "Polish" jokes lately?

How about a few Italian jokes? Or "Jewish" or "Hungarian" or "Slovak" or "Irish" or—

But wait a minute. Isn't this the United States of America, the world's great "melting pot" of nations where everyone gets boiled down to John Doe, American?

Not quite. A lot of Americans still think of themselves as "hyphenated" Americans—Italian-American, Polish-American, Hungarian-American.

Millions still cling to the customs, language, and traditions of the lands from which they—or their ancestors—sprang.

And millions of other Americans—blacks, Indians, Puerto Ricans, and Mexican-Americans—in large part stand aside from the mainstream of American life and culture.

The pot is still boiling; immigration has doubled since a new immigration law in 1965 removed the restrictions that sought to preserve the nation's 1920 ethnic balance.

Increasing numbers of Italians, Greeks, Chinese, Filipinos, Poles, and Yugoslavs are replacing the declining numbers of previously favored. Northern Europeans.

Gone is the fear and resentment of an influx of "foreigners" into America, yet doubt of America's capacity to absorb them still exists.

And today there is growing interest in the process of acculturation—what makes an American, what course the nation must follow in seeking to resolve into harmony the diversity of peoples that is America.

The persistence of ethnic identity, or what a presidential commission has called "the myth of the melting pot," is the subject of a series of far-reaching conferences being held across the nation.

These sessions seek to determine just what it is that makes ethnic identity, how it helps hold groups together and gives members of those groups a sense of belonging.

They will examine conditions and institutions—the neighborhood church or synagogue, family, jobs, and schools—that permit ethnic communities to keep their identities.

Statistically, this ethnic concern is understandable. Some 34 million Americans, or 19 percent, may be considered "ethnic." That is the number listed by the most recent census as of "foreign stock," which the Census Bureau defines as either foreign-born or with at least one foreign-born parent.

Others have defined "ethnic" as any individual who differs from "the basic white Protestant Anglo-Saxon settlers by religion, language, and culture."

And while ethnic groups are being studied and discussed, they themselves have taken on a new militancy.

The cries of black power, red power, and brown power have been joined by those for "ethnic" power.

And it is the ethnic fraternal orders—the Sons of Italy, the Polish Falcons, the Hibernians, the National Slovak Society—that are raising these cries.

Today there is hardly a hyphenated American alive who does not have some kind of ethnic spokesman, some promoter of his national heritage, some organization prepared to appeal for his vote or to protect him from slights and slanders.

And black Americans share with members of white ethnic groups in the quest for cultural identity. No other ethnic group in the U.S.—except the American Indian—has suffered society's rejection and repression so durably and deeply as black Americans.

Finding a cultural identity within white society has become a key element for many blacks in the movement to improve the lot of black people generally.

This new cultural awareness, this new emphasis on ethnic identity and ethnic action, has brought to the fore once again the decades-old debate over "Americanization." The debate is focused on a conflict in values between cultural pluralism and the "melting pot" that has led Americans into the search for answers to basic and persisting questions.

What is the proper balance between the need for cultural cohesion and the desirability of contributions of minority cultures in a pluralistic society? Can the melting pot idea succeed? Does America offer minorities a chance to participate fully in American life? Does it compel them to give up old ways for new in order to participate? Or does it compel them to give up old ways for new and still deny them participation?

Questions for Inquiry and Discovery

- Should minority hold on to their old world ties?
- 2. If people think of themselves as hyphenated Americans, can America be a melting pot?
- 3. Should minorities be compelled to give up their ethnic traits?
- 4. Can a person be culturally aware and still be an American?

THEME II - CHINESE-AMERICANS

The Nature of Chinese Immigration

Why did the Chinese emigrate to the United States from 1840 to 1882?

- 1. Large-scale immigration originated in the late 1840's due to the Taipang rebellion which paralized trade and industry in Southeastern China.
- 2. The Gold Rush of the 1850's brought a labor force into California.
- 3. The construction of the transcontinental railroad speeded the eastward movement of the Chinese into regions previously unsettled.

What were the patterns of Chinese immigration?

- 1. Most immigrants came from the province of Kwantung and port cities along the coast.
- 2. Some 300,000 individuals entered the United States between 1850-1882.

Why did the Chinese emigrate to the United States between 1882-1970?

- 1. Between the enactment of the Chinese Exclusion Act in 1882 and its repeal in 1943, only small groups of Chinese immigrants entered this country.
- 2. During the twentieth century, immigrants came into the United States illegally from mainland China and the Crown Reasons colony of Hong Kong.
- 3. The Displaced Persons Act of the Refugee Relief Act (1953) permitted many immigrants to become permanent residents and citizens of the United States.

The teacher may want to assign for outside reading or homework, "Angel Levine" by Bernard Malamud in collection of short stories about minorities, 'The Outnumbered, Dell Publications.

Synopsis:

It is the kitchen of the old Jewish tailor Manischevitz, who is swamped with bad luck and has called on God for help. He discovers a somewhat sinister Negro in a black leather jacket and snappy hat of the Lenox Ave. Cavaler. The Negro explains that he is Alexander Levine, a Jewish angel come to aid the tailor. His receiving help, however, depends on the tailor's belief in him as an angel. The Negro lacks the looks and manners associated with the angel image. The tailor is inclined to skepticism.

Questions for Inquiry and Discovery:

- 1. What are the characteristics attributed to Manischevitz and Angel Levine by Malamud.
- 2. How do these compare with the Negro and Jewish stereotypes we developed in class?
- 3. Why did Manischevitz doubt that the Negro was an angel?
  - a. Was Manischevitz right in his doubts?
  - b. What prejudices does Manischevitz exhibit?
- 4. What does Manischevitz mean by "So if God sends to me an angel, why a black? Why not a white that there are so many of them?"
- 5. Does Manischevitz feel superior to the Negro? For what reasons? Is he justified in his feelings of superiority?
- 6. Upon Manischevitz's visit to Harlem he stops into a Jewish synagogue and hears an old man talk with a boy. "But has dis spirit got some kind of shade or color? asked the boy.

"Man of course not. A spirit is a spirit."

"Then how come we is colored?" the boy asked.

Neighborhoods: Pelham Parkway Is an Urban Shtetl in the Bronx

by Murray Schumach

"It's our Florida here," said Mrs. Ethel Rudin. "We sit here every day in the sun."

She was one of scores of elderly persons seated on boxes and folding chairs in front of stores, or standing in curbside clusters along Lydig Avenue, in the Pelham Parkway section of the Bronx.

While younger women had trouble navigating with baby carriages, the elderly talked of the suburbs to which their children had migrated; of births, bar mitzvahs, weddings, sickness, death.

Horns honked as card backed up for two blocks from White Plains Road and jockeyed for parking spots. Bargain prices plastered in platoons across windows lured droves of shoppers.

Animated Community

If Sholem Aleichem, the chronicler of the little East European Jewish communities, had created such a shtetl here, it would have been very much like Pelham Parkway.

"There are very few neighborhoods in this city that still have the closeknit feeling of Pelham Parkway," Bronx Borough President Robert Abrams, who grew up in the area, said recently.

At a time when many neighborhoods have disintegrated, Pelham Parkway has resisted major change. This is partly because the many ties of old friendships are strong. Another reason is that many apartments have controlled, and moderate rents. Finally, perhaps most important, a large number of the residents are not lured by suburbia.

Here some 50,000 Jews and a smattering of non-Jews have created an animated, but orderly, community among the well-kept apartment houses and huddles of private homes arrayed between Bronx Park East and Williamsbridge Road; between Waring Avenue and Bronxdale Avenue.

"A million people can pass and say hello to you in this neighborhood," said Joseph Oksman, who set up a department store shortly after World War I, to become the first merchant along Lydig Avenue.

Mr. Oksman, now retired like many of his old friends, recalls that well into the nineteen-twenties the Jews, who had pushed north from the Lower East Side, used to delight in buying vegetables at neighborhood farms owned by Italians.

Mr. Oksman, now retired like many of his old friends, recalls that well into the nineteen-twenties the Jews, who had pushed north from the Lower East Side, used to delight in buying vegetables at neighborhood farms owned by Italians.

To the youngsters who swarm in and around the schoolyard of Public School 105, churning up games of basketball, softball and stickball, the era of the local farm is as remote as the possibility of collecting Social Security.

But generation gaps do not seem to be serious here. On Sundays--weather permitting--adults and youngsters gather on Holland and Cruger Avenues, outside the schoolyard, to cheer the players. Enterprising youngsters turn a little profit by selling bottles of iced soft drinks.

Every April--this year it is April 11--the big event is the march of the community's 16 Little League teams. More than 200 boys, aged 8 to 12 with two bands and a police escort, parade through the community to the baseball field in Bronx Park, where predecessors have played since 1957.

"Each neighborhood should have children like ours," Mrs. Rose Sellinger said. "This would be a better city if they did."

Many adolescents wear hippie attire and walk in a slouch. But true to reighborhood tradition they still congregate on the low wall along the south side of Pelham Parkway, near White Plains Road. Sometimes they get too noisy late at night and the police chase them.

The library, at 2147 Barnes Avenue--the Van Nest-Pelham Branch--is a matter of special pride in this community. For 25 years the residents pressed for a public library. It opened in 1968.

While most branches of the public library system have been losing circulation, this one has become busier. Its circulation for last January was 13,708, about 1,000 more than that of the preceding January.

This, however, may be a reflection of the reading interests of the elderly. The library has special sections of books in Yiddish, French, Italian and German. It also has a nice selection of books in large type. Librarians have found that some adolescents use the building as a hangout.

"Sometimes they get too noisy," said Mrs. Phyllis Mack, assistant librarian. "The girls flirt and the couples sit around eating. You have to tell them to leave."

Political Zest

Politically, this neighborhood knows no season. Campaign time merely intensifies the usual political arguments. Every candidate who tours the Bronx knows that one stop should be under the el, at White Plains Road and Lydig Avenue.

Candidates who hope to use a sound truck at this corner on a weekend, have it parked there the night before. "First come, first served," said a policeman there. At almost any time on Saturday, some candidate or his supporter is almost certain to be in position with microphone or bullhorn and leaflets.

Last Saturday, for instance, two Representatives, an Assemblyman and a Democratic state committeeman were within 50 feet of one another at the same time, soliciting support from this overwhelming Democratic constituency.

Assemblyman Alan Hochberg-he calls himself "the young whirlwind" was on hand to remind the people of his resolution urging President Nixon to sell or supply arms to Israel. Representative James H. Scheuer, preceded by a few helpers, was making his way among the voters, shaking hands, listening to suggestions.

Across the street, in the bustling Penrod stationery store, Lou Goldberg, who opened the place some 40 years ago, grinned and said: "You never have empty stores on Lydig Avenue."

Catholic Girls Take Bagel Tour

By ISRAEL SHENKER

t A blue station wagon crossed Times Square yesterday morning, and as it went east on 46th Street eight Roman Catholic girls inside merrily sung "Shabat Shaloinl · (Welcome

Rabbi Bernard M. Cohen eamed, took his right hand rom the wheel, and con-lucted.

"Rabbi," asked a pas-ienger, "what would Teyye, in Tiddler on the Roof," have all about a rabbly who went hrough a red light?"

"A very good question," aid the rabbl, blushing. Now girls, let's think. What would Teyye say about going through a red light?" through a red light?"

"It's only a machine, and I'm a man," was one suggestion.

Light vs. Man

"The light keeps changing, and I remain the same,"

was another.

"Very good," said the rabbi, and turned south on Second Avenue.

It was the sixth day of an eight-day visit by students from St. Mary-of-the-Moods College, outside Terre Haute, Ind., to New York's Jewish community. For the tour, plus ains lectures by the rabbi, the students will get one or two credits toward gradua-

Each of the girls contributed $175 for expenses, and $40 to 850 tuition for the intersession course entitled "Searching and Discovering the Jewish Community of New York."

Rabbi Cohen, a Reform clergyman, who is 39 years old and was born in New York, said he was the first rabbi on the faculty of any Roman Catholic college. He divides his time between the campus and his congregation, and likes to think that in Terre Hante-which was once a Ku Klux Klan stronghold -ecumenism now flourishes.

The women in his charge (his wife and a woman friend came along as chaperones) had already attended Hassidic prayers in the Williamsburgh section of Brooklyn, toured WEVD ("the station that speaks your language"), and sampled specialties at Katz's Delicatessen, Streit's Matzo Factory and Shapiro's Kosher Wine Company. They had heard lectures on Talmud and the generation gap, and on the survival of Yiddish.

The rabbi enjoined his students to understand Judaism "not as a piece of gefilte fish or a sour pickle, not as something gastrointestinal, but as something cerebral."

"You're missionaries this week," he said jokingly as the car passed 27th Street.

"Rabbi," came a voice from the rear, "could you put the window down a little bat?" "What does this have to do with the missionaries?"

ha asked.
"You'll have dead missionaries unless you put the window down," the young woman answered.

At Kaplan's Pickle Stand, 144 Orchard Street, the rabbi invited his rudents to take pickles out of a barrel. "But make it fist," said Mr. Kaplan, "It's Friday, I have to do business."

As the class paused for one of many quick sidewalk homilies, a woman strolled up. Hearing the rabbi talk about "a yarmulka, a skuil cap, a cardinal's cap," she bluted: "A religious hypocrite! Worse than an atheist! Don't be a hypocrite!"

A second woman asked what was going on. When she heard the group was studying Judaism on the lower East Side she announced, "There isn't a trace of Judaism here any more. Ask me and I'll tell you?

At a tomato stand, the class noted a sign saving: "Closed for Vacation—Thank God," and then everyone went into Yonah Schimmel's Knish Bakery, at 137 East Housion Street. The owner, Arthur Berger, explained that his grandrather had started baking knishes in 1910, after proving unsuccessin as a

"Our columns are not synadicated," he replied, "because there are two Jawish papers here in New York, and if we syndicated we'd be printing the same things. We're probably the only real world newspaper, except for one other one in New York. But that one week to explass solders that one goes to atabassadors

"When we get back to the hotel," Miss Kelly asked the rabbi "can we go to St. Malachy's Church? They're going to have the Veneration of the Cross."

"Of course, my little Tal-mud scholar," the rabbi replied.

ERIC

The reception of eastern European Jews in the few great cities where they first settled was hardly less adverse. Almost as strange to the German Jews who had preceded them as to the native Americans, these impoverished, undernourished refugees wore long black coats and untamed beards, practiced a distinctive religious ritual, and spoke their own language - Yiddish with vivid gesticulations. Doubtless they were dirty; such at least was the initial and contemptuous image their presence inspired. The New York Tribune in 1882 noted blandly: "Numerous complaints have been made in regard to the Hebrew immigrants who lounge about Battery Park, obstructing the walks. Their filthy condition has caused many of the people who are accustomed to go to the park to seek a little recreation and fresh air to give up this practice....To the first impression unfriendly observers soon added the traditional Shylock stereotype. Many of the Jewish immigrants started out in America with a peddlers pack. Here, to many Americans, was the very personification of avarice and cunning." Money is their God," wrote Jacob Riis of the Russian Jews as a whole.

What is a Jew?

THIS QUESTION was raised recently in Israel, homeland of 2% million Jews. The debate was sparked when Benjamin Shalit, an Israeli naval officer, tried to register his children as Jews, even though his wife is a Christian.

The question of "what is a Jew?" may be as old as the Jewish people theniselves. The Jews trace their ancestry back to the second century B,C. The debate over what constitutes Jewishness continues, though certain guidelines are recognized by almost all Jews.

Jewish Characteristics

The following characteristics usually identify a Jew as a Jew throughout the world:

RELIGION. Jews follow the religion of Judaism. They believe in one God and follow the teachings of the Old Testament. Ancient Jewish tradition holds that Moses gave the Jewish people the Ten Commandments on Mt. Sinai, Israel.

HISTORY. According to ancient Jewish tradition, Moses led the Jews out of Egypt into the promised land of Israel. After many centuries there, they were defeated in battle by the Romans and were forced to scatter to many different regions.

The survival of the Jewish people is followed, there may be trouble in was at stake in World War II. About 6 million dews were killed, because of their beliefs, under Hitler's rule.

WAY OF LIFE. Jews have traditional food and songs. Hebrew, the official language of Israel, is studied by many Jews the world over. Jews celebrate holidays such as Passover (to commemorate the escape from slavery in Egypt) and Hanukkah (the festival of lights).

SEMITES. The Jews, like the Arabs, are Semitic peoples. In ancient times Semites lived in Baby-Ionia, Assyria, and Phoenicia.

When news of the debate in Israel over Jewishness reached the U.S., Jews reacted with keen interest. America's 512 million Jews are divided into three main religious sects, or groups: Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform.

Rabbis of the Orthodox group, a sect that demands strict obedience to Jewish laws and customs, claim that only religion should identify a person as a Jew. Orthodox American Jews abide by the Halakah (ha-LA-kuh) law that states: Only a child of a Jewish mother or a mothe er who was converted to Judaism: can be considered a Jew.

One American Orthodox rabbil warned that unless the ancient law

Israel and other Jewish communities in the world; no one will know who the real Jews are.

Some Conservative rabbis-Jews who are not as resistant to change as the Orthodox group-have taken a more flexible stand. "In any modern country," one Conservative rabbi said, "mixing politics with religion is bound to create problems that only courts can solve."

Another View

Besides rabbis, many prominent Jews in the U.S. have also entered the debate. Max Lerner, the author of America as a Civilization, made this statement: "To be a Jew is to be a member of a historical community, an old and creative civilization of a people who were dispersed from their original home and radiated out over the world."

Will Jewishness ever be defined to the satisfaction of ALL Jews?

Many persons are doubtful. One Jewish leader has said: "I'm more optimistic about peace coming to the Middle East."

The Nature of the Puerto Rican Migration

Why did Puerto Ricans migrate to the mainland?

- 1. Puerto Ricans migrated mainly for economic reasons.
  - a. The primarily agrarian economy could not provide sufficient employment for its labor force.
  - b. Overpopulation has been a great spur to Puerto Rican migration.
- 2. Puerto Rican soldiers took advantage of the opportunities on the mainland.
- 3. Improved air transportation between San Juan and New York City increased migration.

What were the patterns of Puerto Rican migration?

- 1. Puerto Ricans became American citizens on March 17, 1917.
  - a. Migration to New York began in 1917 when the earliest Puerto Rican migrants came to Brooklyn, N. Y.
  - b. The number of Puerto Ricans doubled between 1920-1930.
- 2. Puerto Rican migration rose sharply at the end of World War II.
- 3. Puerto Rican migration varies with job opportunities in the U.S.
- 4. The migrants of the 1950's were different from the migrants of the twenties.
  - a. They came from urban rather than rural areas.
  - b. They were younger than previous migrants.
- 5. Puerto Ricans have become more dispersed in the United States.
- 6. A return migration in conjunction with a curtailed migration out of Puerto Rico has existed since 1960.

The Nature of the Puerto Rican Identity

Do Puerto Ricans have a racial identity?

- 1. Puerto Ricans cannot be considered a race because they may be members of many races.
  - a. Puerto Ricans are varying mixtures of Caucasian, Negro and Indian.
  - b. Appearances vary widely.
- 2. Puerto Rican history helps explain the diversity of races.
  - a. Puerto Rico was inhabited by Indians when Christopher Columbus discovered the island in 1493.
  - b. The Spanish ruled the island for more than three centuries.
  - c. Africans were brought to Puerto Rico as slaves in the 16th Century.
- 3. A wide separation between races did not exist in Puerto Rico, e.g. European, Africans and Indians intermingled and often intermarried.

Has religion created a Puerto Rican identity?

- 1. Roman Catholicism is not a national church in Puerto Rico.
- 2. The Catholic church provides the general framework for the Puerto Rican population.
  - a. It sets the standards for baptism, marriage, burials, and its calendar sets the holidays and festivals.
  - b. There is a disparity between affiliation and participation in church activities.
  - c. Participation is greatest among women.
  - d. Religion has a social significance in Puerto Rico.
- 3. Puerto Ricans have not established national parishes of their own as earlier immigrants.
- 4. Many Puerto Ricans have joined the Pentecostal church or one of the established Protestant denominations.

- 4. Many Puerto Ricans have joined the Pentecostal church or one of the established Protestant denominations.

Has the Puerto Rican family created a group identity?

- 1. The Puerto Rican culture has an extended family.
  - a. There was always a place for the aunt, uncle and grandparents.
  - b. The "copradre" or "comadre" provided a second set of parents if the rearing of children became too overbearing.
  - c. There was always a family member ready to take care of the children.
  - d. The Puerto Ricans have strong family ties.

- 2. The husband is the supreme authority in the family.
  - a. The Puerto Rican male has little to do with the rearing of children.
  - b. He expects respect and obedience from his children.
  - c. The rearing of children is the responsibility of the mother.
- 3. Urbanization, industrialization and intercultural relations have reduced the family cohesiveness.
- 4. The woman has an increased role in the Puerto Rican family.
  - a. The earning power of women has increased which means a stronger demand to be heard in family affairs.
  - b. There is an overprotectiveness of children especially among unmarried females.

Has the mass media provided a group identity?

- 1. Spanish language press provides a need for pride in the Latin culture.
- 2. The Spanish language press and radio station aid the Puerto Rican to adjust to unfamiliar surroundings.

The Fatterns of Prejudice and Discrimination against the Puerto Rican

How were Puerto Ricans economically discriminated against?

- l. Puerto Ricans have been concentrated into unskilled and semi-skilled jobs, mainly in manufacturing and service industries.
- 2. The people were discriminated at the lower levels of the occupational scale which was linked with language difficulties, union policies and personal factors.
- 3. Various unions have discriminated against Puerto Ricans seeking membership.
- 4. Some Puerto Ricans have been considered as bad risks in banks, credit houses and service corporations.

How were Puerto Ricans socially discriminated against?

- 1. Color has complicated the problem of mobility for the Puerto Rican.
- 2. Puerto Ricans have been forced to live in slums and dingy tenements.
- 3. Individuals could not hold jobs at professional jobs (schools, hospitals and social centers) due to language difficulties.
- 4. The Puerto Rican people have not received adequate police protection.
- 5. The people have been stereotyped by possessing the following characteristics; high tension people, sexy girls, Latin lovers, rice and beans, over-sensitive, wear bright colors, good dancers, carry knives, all on welfare.
- 6. They have been blamed for many crimes and antisocial acts.

How were the Puerto Ricans politically discriminated against?

- 1. Puerto Ricans were discriminated in the courts since the procedure of the American judicial system deprived them of using their own language.
- 2. Language literacy tests discriminated against Puerto Ricans from voting in elections.

- 12. Puerto Ricans have served in the United States military service during World War I, World War II, Korean War and the Viet-Nam conflict.
- 13. The tempo of their music has influenced the American entertainment field.

Related Concepts - Contributions

Historical circumstances, not heredity, determine a people's cultural achievement.

Cultural contributions are not the monopoly of any ethnic group.

The teacher can choose several songs from "West Side Story" to illustrate the problems of the Puerto-Rican minority in America.

Questions for Inquiry and Discovery

- 1. What is the setting for "West Side Story"?
- 2. What reasons might you offer for the conflict between Jets & Sharks?
- 3. What stereotypes do each have of each other?
- 4. What tensions are apparent in the "Prologue" and "Somethings Coming"?
- 5. What attitudes do Puerto Rican women have of America?

  What attitudes do Puerto Rican men have of America
  - a. How do these attitudes differ?
- 6. What explanation might there be for the differing attitudes?
- 7. In what respects do these attitudes compare with earlier immigrants?
- 8. What is the major theme in "Got Officer Krupke"?
  - a. What responsibility must society take for the prejudice between Sharks & Jets?
- 9. In "Somewhere" what do Maria and Tony hope for?
- 10. Can we envision a place where men will be free from prejudice?
- 11. What could be necessary to achieve this goal?
  - a. Is it worth fighting for?

As a summary activity the students will be arranged into groups in order to compose a list of solutions for a hypothetical minority group problem e.g. Black-Jewish Relations. The students will role-play as members of their respective groups and react to the solutions attempted by the group representing the New York City government.

As a follow-up lesson the teacher might want to show a film strip on the Puerto Ricans--A Warren Schloat Product Inc., Prentice-Hall Co., Puerto Ricans Part I.

This film strip illustrates similar points as West Side Story, especially the special problems of Elena Rodriguez, problems that wouldn't be encountered by other minority groups. It raises the question "Can the Puerto Ricans overcome their handicaps?"

Suggested Activities

- 1. After having heard selections from "West Side Story", the student will be able to explain three reasons for inter-group conflict.
- 2. After listening to the song "America, America", the student will be able to explain three problems that Puerto Ricans face in New York City.
- 3. The student will develop a list of criteria describing the manner in which a person forms a value. He will then select three values that are mentioned in "West Side Story" and compare the reasons for their formation with the student's criteria.
- 4. "Officer Krupke" blames the tension on the West Side as society's failure, the student will be able to write a sequel to "West Side Story" in which he will evaluate the programs of N.Y.C. government to correct abuses of society.
- 5. East student will write a short story on the type of life Tom and Maria would live in their society which is from from prejudice, demonstrating knowledge of previous learnings.

How have the Puerto Ricans tempted to adjust to erican life?

Can the Puerto Ricans be as werful a political force as rlier ethnic groups?

What factors indicate that erto ricans have assimilated to American life?

Politically, the Puerto Ricans are certainly on the move. The near victory of Herman Badillo in the Democratic primary has probably removed "the Puerto Rican thing" the way John F. Kennedy's 1960 victory changed the myth about Catholics running for President. This was not supposed to be the year for a Puerto Rican, and Badillo was supposed to have been better off running for the controller's office or as president of the City Council on somebody else's ticket. When he almost won (he lost by 38.000 votes). he established himself and the Puerto Ricans as an important political force in New York. On the other hand, there still remains a problem of apathy to be overcome. The Puerto Ricans are still the hardest people in the city to get registered, because of a combination of factors (distrust of politicians, uneasiness about the language, and fear of anything resembling an agent of the government are some of the factors; among older Puerto Ricans, there is still some feeling that they aren't from New York, that their political candidates are an airplane ride away).

The streak of conservatism in the Puerto Ricans also seems to be widening as more of them make it into the middle class. Many of them join regular Democratic clubs, because they see those clubs as the safest way to make it politically; a man like Tony Mendez, the regular boss of East Harlem, remains a powerful man politically, and some of the less radical or adventurous younger Puerto Ricans don't want to take any chances on blowing a career by playing Don Quixote. Rivalry among Puerto Rican politicians is rather strong, and sometimes leads to bizarre situations: next year there will not be a single Puerto Rican serving on the City Council, despite the fact that there are more Puerto Ricans here than in San Juan. In those councilmanic districts where a Puerto Rican might have been elected, Puerto Ricans ran against each other and non-Puerto Ricans slipped through the seams.

Despite that, the Puerto Rican community seems more together now than it has ever been. "Up until a couple of years ago," a pretty young school-teacher from the Two Bridges district told me, "I was ashamed to say I was a Puerto Rican. I would say I was Spanish, or something like that. Today I'm ashamed for being ashamed. We P.R.s are really going to take this town."

They might just do that-politically, at least-and it might not be such a bad thing. They have already added things to New York which have made it a better place: their music and their food and their sense of the outrageous. No matter where you want to go, if you travel with a Puerto Rican cabdriver, he'll take you there; he'll say: "Hey, I don't know where it is, but you show me, mon, and I take you." The rocky decade with the marriages seems over, and the stable family unit is there again, the way it is in Puerto Rico. There is still a feeling, among those who came here from Puerto Rico that they don't really belong to this town, but in that sense they belong, nowhere. My friend Johnny Manzanet, , who is a boxing commissioner naw, once said to me: "You know, I sit here in New York, and I'm homesick for Salinas; I go home to Salinas and I'm homesick for New York. I don't know what the hell I am."

What seems to be forming is a special breed: the New York Puerto Rican. One who listens to La Lupe and the Beatles, who reads the Times and El Diario, who can move around the East Side pubs and still make it up to the Broadway Casino. He is a baseball fan, because of Orlando Cepeda and Roberto Clemente and a dozen other stars who came up from the island; but he probably does not look for the score of the Ponce-Caguas game anymore; he more than likely roots for the Mets (I have yet to meet a Puerto Rican who cared for pro football or rooted for the Yankees). But he no longer needs to go to prizefights to identify vicariously with heroes. He seems to be breaking down between two New York cultural traditions, with a touch of the third: the Puerto Rican with the can of beer in a paper bag playing dominoes on the street is the Irish Puerto Rican; the guy selling the beer in the bodega is the Jewish Puerto Rican; the guy starting to move into numbers and narcotics in East Harlem is the Mafia Puerto Rican. Ah, give me your tired, your. poor . . .

In 1910, 500 Puerto Ricans lived New York City. Today the figure 850,000. That amounts to 11 perent of the city's population.

Not all Puerto Ricans live in El arrio. There are large Puerto Rican ttlements in other boroughs of the ty, and in cities in other states: ewark (New Jersey), Stamford Connecticut), and Chicago (Illinois). Like earlier immigrant groups, uerto Ricans took low-paying, low-cill jobs. They did factory labor, ushed garment district carts, ashed dishes. But increasingly, uerto Ricans are earning middle nd upper incomes in business, killed trades, and the professions. Some have reaped fame in enter-some nave reaped tame in enterninment, sports, and politics. These nclude actor José Ferrer; actress Rita Aoreno; the Pittsburgh Pirates' Roerto Clemente, and also Herman Baillo, Borough President of the Bronx New York). The visitor to El Barrio is struck by the variety of people. Some Puerto Ricans are white, some are black, and many are varying mixtures of Caucasian, Negro, and Indian. Appearances range widely, from fair to dark skin, from straight to wiry hair, from blue to black eyes.

For an explanation of the richness of Puerto Rican looks, one must go back into history. Puerto Rico was inhabited by Indians when Christopher Columbus discovered it in 1493. The Spanish ruled the island for more than three centuries. French, English, and other Europeans also settled on Puerto Rico. Africans were brought there as slaves in the 16th century. In 1898 the U.S. took Puerto Rico from Spain.

As wide a separation between races did not exist in Puerto Rico as it did in the U.S. Slavery was not as harsh. Europeans, Africans, and Indians intermingled more, and often intermarried.

To learn more about Puerto Rico and race, Urban World talked to Herman. Badillo, 39, the intelligent, handsome Borough President of the Bronx. Born in Puerto Rico, he came to New York at the age of 12.

"The Puerto Rican does not grow up with feelings of racism because racism is not part of the institutions of society," Badillo said.

A Protestant, Badillo attributed most of Puerto Rico's racial outlook to the Roman Catholic Church. "The church said the slave had to go to the same church as the master. Slaves were married in church and slave owners were not allowed to separate husbands and wives and children.

"The most important contribution that Puerto Ricans can make to America is to maintain the relaxed attitude toward race that they brought to the mainland."

The movement toward more formal groupings also got its impetus from attempts organize Puerto Rican workers in the hotel and restaurant industries and from later attempts to organize groups to participate in the Hispanic Day Parades.

Parade in June

The highlight of the year for most of the clubs is the Puerto Rican Day Parade in June, when each club supplies a float and often brings the Mayor of its hometown here to lead the club's con-tingent. Another important activity is the Puerto Rican Folklore Fiesta in August when many of the clubs have booths where products from the island are displayed.

The size of the clubs' active membership ranges from about 30 members in the Tox Baja Social Club to about 300 in the club from Rincon.

Most of the clubs are open only on weekends, when families can relax and exchange gossip or play cards or bil-liards. Others, however, have become involved in the antipoverty program and have been providing service to the community on a full-time basis.

Through the Puerto Rican Development Community Project, an antipoverty group. 31 of the clubs have received funds for workers, who provide information to the public about housing, education, welfare, voter registration or about classes in remedial English.

Some of the groups have been funded directly by the Human Resources Administration, the city's antipoverty agency to develop specific programs. For ex-ample the Sociedad Marica-ena, from Maricao, received $75,000 last year to conduct a program for senior citizens. The group hired four workers, a registered nurse and a social worker to assist 157 The workers visit the elder-

Against the Importation of "Coolie" Labor

Chinese immigrants, who first came to America during the California gold rush of 1849, were welcomed as domestic servants, gardeners, and mine laborers. American businessmen, who thought it unlikely that the "coolie" workers would be affected by labor organizers, imported several thousand Chinese to help build the transcontinental railroads. There is also evidence that some employers used Chinese in other industries to lower wage scales and to break strikes. The Boston Transcript reported on June 13, 1870, that Chinese laborers were transported to North Adams, Massachusetts, when the shoemakers there went on strike. Native laborers held a protest meeting in Boston and issued the following resolutions. Source: Boston Investigator, July 6, 1870 [A Documentary History of American Industrial Society, John R. Commons, et al., eds., Vol. IX, pp. 86-88. Cleveland: The Arthur H. Clark Company, 1910. By permission].

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the workingmen of this city was held in Tremont Temple last Wednesday afternoon and evening. Its object was to take some measures relative to the importation of coolie labor into Massachusetts. Many speeches were made, the substance of which is embodied in the following resolutions passed by the meeting:

Whereas, efforts are now being made to introduce into the manufactories of this state coolie labor from China in order to cheapen, and, if possible, degrade the intelligent, educated, loyal labor of Massachusetts; therefore, be it

Resolved, that while we welcome voluntary laborers from every clime, and pledge them the protection of our laws and the assurance of equal opportunities in every field of industry, still we cannot but deprecate all attempts to introduce into the manufactories of this state a servile class of laborers from China, or elsewhere, who come in fulfillment of contracts made on foreign soil, and with no intention to become American citizens or aid in the permanent development of American resources.

Resolved, that in the language of the Massachusetts Bill of Rights, government is instituted for the common good, for the protection, safety, and happiness of the people, and not for the profit, honor, or private interest of any one man, family, or class of men. Therefore, the people alone have an incontrovertible, unalienable, and indefeasible right to institute government, and to reform, alter, or totally change the same when their protection, safety, property, or happiness require it; and we, therefore, declare our fixed and unalterable purpose to use the power of the ballot to secure the protection, safety, property, and happiness of the working people of this commonwealth as against this new attempt of capital to cheapen labor and degrade the working classes by importing coolie slaves for that purpose.

Resolved, that we tender our thanks to the Honorable Henry Wilson for his earnest efforts to secure the passage of a law prohibiting the fulfillment on American soil of these infamous contracts for coolic labor; and we call upon our representatives in Congress to use all their influence to secure the passage of such a law as is due alike to the best interests of the country, as well as a measure of justice to the coolie, who, ignorant of the value of labor, accepts conditions degrading alike to him and to us.

Resolved, that the conduct of the Massachusetts legislature in twice refusing to take action calculated to check the introduction of the coolic system into this state deserves the rebuke and condemnation of every workingman in the state, as well as the condemnation of every man who believes in the dignity of labor or the supremacy of liberty over tyranny.

Resolved, that we ignore all elements, whether in this meeting or out, which have for their tendency the strengthening of any man's chance for political honors who is not pledged to represent the greatest number of the people for the people's good, and who is not willing to be held accountable to the people for his political actions.

Resolved, that we have voted for protection to American industry at the suggestions of the rich manufacturers who owned the protected products, thinking to help ourselves; but we now find that, under the scheme of protection, capital is to get the protection and American labor is to be reduced to the Chinese standard of rice and rats; and we cut loose, now and forever, from the false and lying knaves who have beguiled us.

Resolved, that the rights of workingmen will gain no successful foothold in Massachusetts until the workingmen repudiate those time-serving politicians who think to retain office at any price of double-dealing.

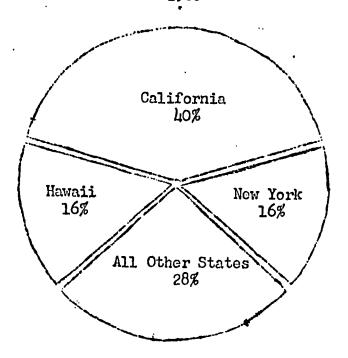

Resolved, that we cordially endorse the course of Honorable Henry K. Oliver, chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and his assistants for the able report on the condition of labor in this state, and pledge ourselves all the aid in our power by collecting and placing before the people the true condition and needs of the working classes.

The Nature of Irish Immigration

Why did the Irish emigrate to the United States from 1790-1850?

- 1. Catholic emigration from Ireland originated after the American Revolution, so that by the time of the famine migration of 1848-1850, their was a large Irish settlement in the United States.
- 2. Heavy emigration was caused by the density of population in Ireland, since it was greater than any other country of Western Europe.
- 3. Landed aristocrats controlled the lands, taxes and courts throughout Ireland.
- in the 1850's.
- 5. Famine, ship companies seeking fares, recruitment of unskilled labor and the landed tenure system brought the rural population to the United States.

What were the patterns of Irish immigration?

- 1. The Irish were a rural people in Ireland and became an urban people in the United States.
- 2. Huge numbers of Irish immigrants settled in large Eastern seaboard cities.

Why did the Irish emigrate to the United States from 1850-1920?

- 1. Over four and a quarter million Irish immigrants entered the United States between 1820-1920.
- 2. The Irish noved out of the Atlantic seaboard communities as laborers, working on riverboats and railroad lines.
- 3. Towards the end of the 19th century such towns as Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago and Omaha became centers of Irish strength.
- 4. San Francisco became a migrant center during the Gold Rush period and eventually the people settled in inland cities of Butte, Montana,

  Denver, Colorado and Virginia City, Nevada.

Related Concepts

The migration of peoples has produced change. (H)

What role did the Irish community play in creating a group awareness?

1. The City

- a. The concentration of population was situated along seacoast cities for economic reasons. For example, new York City and Boston had large Irish populations.
  - People lived in sub-standard housing units (Hell's Kitchen).
- b. Individuals lived near friends or relatives from the same village.
- c. Newcomers were helped finding jobs in construction work or manual labor employment.

How did the Irish family create a group awareness?

- 1. The family was a nuclear group with the father as the head of the household (patriarch).
- 2. The family was inculcated with the belief that it must maintain a united effort if it were to survive.
- 3. The widowed women became a unifying symbol of family harmony in the community.
- 4. The young people were bound to their family, as long as they lived within the community.
- 5. An inheritance system led to late marriage among unmarried men and women.

How did religion create a group awareness?

- 1. The church was a formative influence on the Irish character. It formed the life of the people and interlocked the divergent elements of the national character.
- 2. The church was the one Irish institution that the people could regard as their own.
- 3. The church in the United States was the church of the poor.
- 4. The parish church served as a link between the political word and the neighborhood.
- 5. The Irish won control of the American Roman Catholic church because of political skill and residing in strategic locations.
- 6. The cardinal became a power of strength in religious life
  For example; Cardinal Gibbons, Cardinal Hayes and Cardinal Cushing

How did the Irish fraternal organizations create a group awareness?

- 1. The parish church permeated the Irish social organization.
- 2. The Holy Name Society, the social, athletic, political (Tammany Hall), county, fire engine companies, church and community organizations became the social thread of Irish solidarity and separatism.

Did the Irish attitude toward education create a group awareness?

- 1. The idea of a separate school system originated in Ireland in 1849.
- 2. The Irish clergy in the United States was committed fo a church controlled system of education.
- 3. Catholic students in parochial schools avoided exposure to the influence of Protestant values.
- 4. The parochial school kept the special identity of the Irish since it established separate educational and social attitudes.
- 5. The separate educational system developed outstanding colleges of higher learning for example; Fordham University, Boston College and Notre Dame University.

How did the saloon create a group awareness for the Irish?

- 1. The saloon was a social center for the poorly paid Irish workers.
- 2. The saloon became the information center for news about the parish, jobs, politics and Ireland.

The Nature of Italian Immigration

Why did Italians emigrate to the United States?

- 1. Political or religious persecution played less of a role than abject poverty in making Italians come to the U.S.
- 2. Most of the land in Southern Italy was owned by aristocrats which left little opportunity for individual advancement.
- 3. Italian peasants, especially those in the South, were saddled with unproductive land, high rents, absentee landlords and high taxes.

What were the patterns of Italian immigration?

- 1. The first Italian immigrants were artisans from Northern Italy.
- 2. The period of greatest migration was between 1880-1920.
  - a. More than  $3\frac{1}{2}$  million Italians migrated to the U.S.
  - b. Most of the immigrants were from Southern Italy (including Sicily).
  - c. One of the single most sustained movement of population from a single country.
  - d. One of the smallest proportions of migrating women and children.
  - e. One of the highest proportion of returning immigrants.
- 3. Many Italian immigrants wanted to earn enough money in America to return to buy a house or farm in Italy.
- 4. Southern Italians brought a folk peasant culture; they came mostly from small village backgrounds as peasant farmers, peasant workers or simple artisans.

Concepts:

The migration of peoples has produced change. (H)

No significant differences exist in the innate intelligence and capabilities of human beings from varying racial and ethnic backgrounds. (A-S)

Italians Create A Group Awareness

What role did the Italian community play in creating a group awareness?

- 1. Southern Italians congregated with others from the same community.
- 2. The ethnic enclave permitted the new immigrants to fulfill their needs.
- 3. A "Little Italy" was established in almost every city with a population over 25,000.

- 4. The Italian immigrants sought a place where they could hear familiar accents and where there were familiar Italians.
- 5. The Italian acighborhood illustrated a marked stability from the time of immigration through the 1960's.
- 6. Many Italian communities were established in semi-rural areas in which they could best use their agricultural skills.

How did the Italian family create a group awareness?

- 1. Central to the Italian family was the principle of primo-geniture.
  - a. the line of authority through the oldest male
  - b. Sons were taught skills that were needed as heads of family.
  - c. The oldest son was expected to carry on father's occupation.
- Girls were taught their roles as future wives and mothers; their life was carefully chaperoned.
- 3. The family was extended in nature.
  - a. There was always a place for the aunt, uncle and grandparents.
  - b. Strong family ties exist in an extended family.
- 4. Success meant maintaining, "Onore di famialia," cohesive pride and honor;
  Not to labor for ones family was to risk a "brutta figura" or loss of dignity.

Did religion create a group awareness?

- 1. In Italy the church was the center of religious and social life.
- 2. Fiestas would center around the church.
- 3. In Italy, the parish priest come from the village and therefore knew their needs and problems; In the United States the parish priest didn't even speak the Italian language.
- 4. Church attendance was frequently left to women and the young and old.

  Men would attend church or special occasions or on solemn days.

Did fraternal organizations create a group awareness?

- 1. The Italian community believed that it should take care of its own.
- Many organizations were formed to keep alive the culture of Italy, e.g. Orders of the Sons of Italy established by Dr. Vincent Sellaro.
- 3. Many athletic clubs, singing societies, and educational societies were formed, e.g. Dante Clubs.

Did the Italian attitude toward education create a group awareness?

- 1. The Southern Italian immigrants came from villages in which schools were only for the aristocrats and the peasant child was unwelcome.
- 2. Education was for a cultural style of life to which the peasant couldn't aspire to.
- 3. A peasant culture believes that children should contribute to the family budget as soon as possible.
- 4. Many Italian families prefer parochial education to public education.

Did the Italian press create a group awareness?

- 1. The press published items of community interest, guided the immigrant to meet their unfamiliar situation, satisfied the immigrants' desire for news from the homeland.
- 2. Created a feeling of pride among Italians, made Italians feel equal to other nationalities.
- 3. Enabled the reader to retain old world backgrounds and values in its literary selections.

The Patterns of Prejudice and Discrimination Against Italians

How were Italians economically discriminated against?

- 1. Low paid unskilled Italians were shut out of the A.F.L. because of a literacy test extablished in 1897.
- 2. Italians were unaware of American labor practices
  - a. Italians were offered lower salaries than native workers.
  - b. Italians were used as strike breakers in the marble and stonecutting industries.
  - c. Italians were uninformed of a strike until they arrived at plant.

- d. Some employers required one-hundred percent American workers.
- 3. Italian's were associated with the radical fringe of the labor movement which also brought disfavor.
- 4. Immigration restriction laws were an attempt to cut off the flow of foreign labor into the American market.
- 5. During World War II Italians met with discrimination in war work.
- 6. Language hindered skilled workers from obtaining jobs for which they were trained.

How were Italians religiously discriminated against?

- 1. Italian immigrants suffered discrimination because their religion is a minority one in this country.
- 2. Protestant organizations feared that the Roman Catholic Italians would try to destroy their church, e.g. American Protestant Assn.
- 3. Many Americans believed that the Italians would show greater loyalty to their church than to their adopted country.
- 4. The church urged parochial rather than public education, which led to anti-Italian discrimination.

How were Italians socially discriminated against?

- 1. Italians faced greater barriers when they sought admission to medical and dental schools.
- 2. The Italians became the victims of many stereotypes
  - a. depiction of Italians as criminals
  - b. illiterates having a low standard of living
  - c. a knife wielding group
  - d. sympathizers with socialists and anarchists.
- 3. Their remittances to Italy was used as an illustration of their lack of loyalty to the U.S.

How were Italians politically discriminated against?

- 1. The fear during the 1920's that communism is a product of foreign infiltration.
- 2. Many feared that Italians were attempting to introduce fascism to America.

Concepts:

Varying attitudes toward change produce conflict. (H)

As population density increases, the possibility of conflict and the need for cooperation increase. (G)

All men have the right to nationalism, to freedom of movement, and to residence within a country. (C.L.)

The environment in which a person lives greatly affects his opportunities for personal growth and development. (A-S)

Racism produces prejudice and discrimination. (A-S)

Italians Achieve Economic and Political Advancement

How did Italians achieve economic advancement?

- 1. Italian immigrants were aided in securing jobs by the "padrone" a leader from the same village' the padronis served a necessary function when employers and workers didn't speak the same language.
- 2. Necessity caused many Italian immigrants to take jobs as common laborers on railroads, shippards, construction work, ditch diggers, hod carriers and mortar mixers.
- 3. The ethnic enclave made it possible for many Italians to provide services and open stores which would be used by Italians in the ghetto, e.g. grocery, baker.
- 4. Many merchants who today serve a whole city began as local tradesman for the Italian community.
- 5. Italians gravitated to business that required little capital and freed the individual from the vagaries of employers, e.g. fruits, vegetables, flowers, pushcarts.

Italians contribute to American life?

How have Italians contributed to American life?

- 1. Discoverers and leaders of expeditions in the new world, e.g. Father Eusebio Chino and Father Marco da Nizza.
- 2. Priests who established missions in isolated areas which later became large cities.
- 3. Italians served in all of Americas wars.
- 4. Italians contributed to the development of the American economy.
- 5. Italians demonstrated that the future of agriculture in America was not only in the sprawling one-crop farms of the west and midwest, but in the small fruit and truck gardening of East and South as well.
- Italians contributed to art, music, literature, science and government.
  - a. Government, e.g. Fiorello LaGuardia, Anthony J. Celebrezze, John Volpe, Paul Fino, Victor Anfuso.
  - b. Entertainment, e.g. Mario Lanza, Anne Bancroft, Jimmy Durante, Perry Como, Henry Mancini, Lou Costello, Tony Bennett.
  - c. Art, e.g. Brumidi, Amateis, Franzoni.
  - d. Literature, e.g. Pascal D'Angelo, Pietro DiDonato.
  - e. Science, e.g. Giuseppe Faccidi, Peter Bellasch, Enrico Fermi, B. Rossi.

Concepts:

Historical circumstances, not hereditary, determine a people's cultural achievements.

. Cultural contributions are not the monopoly of any ethnic group.

Paul J. Campisi, "The Italian Family in the United States" in American Minorities. Milton L. Barron (ed.), pp. 310-314.

The teacher may want to assign for outside reading: "Panic" by Donn Byrne in collection of short stories The Outnumbered, Dell Publications.

Synopsis: Guiseppe Pagino has been in America for three months. Guiseppe was put in charge of a little grocery at Eleventh Street and Third Avenue. They put his name in gold letters on the window, filled the till with twenty dollars' worth of change, and told him that the collector would call regularly every Wednesday and Saturday evening. On Saturday evening the collector would hand him back $12. He finds this to be a wonderful country until a character named Squint Lacy asks Guiseppe for "$10 bonus" a week for protection.

Questions for Inquiry and Discovery:

- 1. What stereotypes of Italians can you find in this story?
- 2. What are the stereotypes of Italians from different parts of Italy?
- 3. What parts of Italy do the criminal element come from in this story?
  - a. How might this explain the conflict between southern and northern Italians?
- 4. What was Guiseppe's first impression of America?

  "America is a great country, greater than Italy, greater than Europe, greatest in the world. I am making money-I your son Guiseppe-much money, just like Carnegie, just like Rothschild?"
- 5. What inferences can you make about minorities impression of America?
- 6. Did Guiseppe stereotype the people he saw?

"The ever-current stream of race and nationality and calling him as if in hypnosis. Sleek swarthy men of his own race passed by, with earings of gold and kerchiefs of red and saffron; huge lumbering Negroes, whose appearance recalled to his mind the genii of the Thousand and One Nights; and slim agile Greeks with incredibly handsome faces and incredibly small feet. Occasionally a Turk slid by with the glamour of the East in his bronzed face and silk moustache, and now and then a China man might shu fle along with his black soft hat and his black-quilted coat and his black felt slippers."

- a. What factors contribute to Guiseppes stereotypes.
- b. How is Guiseppe prejudging the people he sees.
- c. Is he prejudiced?

- 7. When Squint Lacy asks Guiseppe for the $10 bonus, how does it change his attitude toward other minorities?
  - "All the motley population of Third Avenue went by: Irishman, Italian, Negro, Chinaman, and Slav. He felt no more interest in these things; he felt only fear. He imagined the city as a gigantic mortar in which crystals like himself were ground to powder. Already he could feel himself disintegrating under the thump of the pestle."
    - a. What factors contribute to Guiseppe stereotypes?
    - b. How do they compare with earlier stereotypes.
    - b. Has his prejudgement turned to prejudice?

What inferences can we make from this story as to why people form stereotypes and prejudices?

What additional data can we gather to verify or disprove our conclusions?

cart or fruitstand, who finds him a city-hall job, or a place with a public-service corporation, who protects him if he violates a law or ordinance in running his business, who goes his bail if he is arrested, and "fixes things" with the police judge or the state's attorney when he comes to trial. Even before Giuseppe is naturalized, it is Tim who remembers him at Christmas with a big turkey, pays his rent at a pinch, or wins his undying gratitude by saving his baby from a pauper burial or sending carriages and flowers to the funeral.

All this kindness and timely aid is prompted by selfish motives. Amply is Tim repaid by Giuseppe's vote on election day. But at first Giuseppe misses the secret of the politician's interest in him, and votes Tim-wise as one shows a favor to a friend. Little does he dream of the dollar-harvest from the public-service companies and the vice interests Tim reaps with the "power" he has built up out of the votes of the foreigners. If, however, Giuseppe starts to be independent in the election booth, he is startled by the Jekyll-Hyde transformation of his erstwhile friend and patron. He is menaced with loss of job, withdrawal of permit or license. Suddenly the current is turned on in the city ordinances affecting him, and he is horrified to find himself in a mysterious network of live wires. With the connivance of a corrupt police force, Tim can even ruin him on a trumped-up charge.

The law of Pennsylvania allows any voter who demands it to receive "assistance" in the marking of his ballot. So in Pittsburgh, Tim expects Giuseppe to demand "assistance" and to take Tim with him into the booth to mark his ballot for him. Sometimes the election judges let Tim thrust himself into the booth despite the foreigner's protests, and watch how he marks his ballot. In one precinct 92 per cent of the voters received "assistance." Two Italians who refused it lost their jobs forthwith. The high-spirited northern Italians resent such intrusion, and some of them threaten to cut to pieces the interloper. But always the system is too strong for them.

Thus the way of Tim is to allure or to intimidate, or even combine the two. The immigrant creeting a little store is visited by a building inspector and warned that his interior arrangements are all wrong. His friends urge the distracted man to "see Tim." He does so, and kind Tim "fixes it up," gaining thereby another loyal handway. The immigrant creeting a little store is visited by a building inspector and warned that his interior arrangements are all wrong. His friends urge the distracted man to "see Tim." He does so, and kind Tim "fixes it up," gaining thereby another loyal henchman. The victim never learns that the inspector was sent to teach him the need of a protector. So long as the immigrant is "right," he may put an encroaching bay-window on his house or store, keep open his saloon after midnight, or pack into his lodging-house more than the legal number of lodgers. Moved ostensibly by a deep concern for public health or safety or morals, the city council enacts a great variety of health, building, and trades ordinances, in order that Tim may have plenty of clubs to hold over the foreigner's head.

So between boss and immigran! grows up a relation like that between a feudal lord and his vassals. In return for the boss's help and protection, the immigrant gives regularly his vote. The small fry get drinks or jobs, or help in time of trouble. The padrone, liquor-dealer, or lodging-house keeper gets license or permit or immunity from prosecution, provided he "delivers" the votes of enough of his fellow-countrymen. The ward boss realizes perfectly what his political power rests on, and is very conscientious in looking after his supporters.

Questions for Inquiry and Discovery

- 1. Why did the editorial support LaGuardia for Mayor of New York City?
- 2. Why did the magazine see LaGuardia as public recognition for Italian-American?
- 3. What role will politics play in the lives of Italian-American?
- 4. To vote against LaGuardia would be a betrayal of their Italian ancestral obligation? Would Italians agree?
- 5. Do ethnic groups vote on the basis of ethnic ties? Should they?

To vote for anyone else but La Guardia, warned an editorial writer for the Sons of Italy Magazine, would be a betrayal of an ancestral obligation:

For nearly a score of years a struggle has been carried on by those of our race in America for public recognition in the populous centers in which live substantial numbers of Italo-Americans.

Self-preservation seems to be a fundamental instinct of nature, and selfishness, unfortunately, is one of the traits of the larger number of human beings. The tendency has therefore been for those of other racial origins who had preceded us in this country to retain the privileges they had taken for themselves, enlarge them, if possible, and exclude others as long as possible from a just portion of representation in the public offices. The struggle carried on by those of our blood has already netted some fruits; in some cases of relative importance, in others sporadic in nature.

In helping to clevate one of our race to an important public office it must be remembered that we are helping ourselves and our individual aspirations for future realization because in almost each case the occupancy of a public office by an Italo-American establishes a precedent for that office which then receives permanent consideration. What is important, then, is to win some of these offices for the first time.<sup>20</sup>

Happer's Weekly, 1871

The Italians were often thought to be the most degraded of the European newcomers. They were swarthy, more than half of them were illiterate, and almost all were victims of a standard of living lower than that of any of the other prominent nationalists. "...Wherever they went, a distinctive sobriquet followed them. "You don't call...an Italian a white man?" a West Coast construction boss was asked. "No, sir," he answered, "an Italian is a Dago." Also, they soon acquired a reputation as blood-thirsty criminals..... On the typical Italian the prison expert commented: "The knife with which he (Italian) cuts his bread he also uses to lop off anothers dago's finger or ear....He is quite as familiar with the sight of human blood as with the sight of the food he eats."

John Higham, Strangers in the Land: Patterns of American Nationalism 1860-1925, New Brunswick, N.J.: Rutgers University Press, 1963, p. 65.

- 1. How were Italians depicted according to John Higham's account?
- 2. What historical circumstances might have led to this type of Italian description?
- 3. Is there any truth to this description?
- 4. How were Italians effected by this description?
